Savely Byzov

Linguist // EFL Teacher // Researcher

hello@saveliybyzov.ru Telegram @savageavery +381 65 8389596

I'm a linguist and university lecturer: I specialise in English language teaching, sociolinguistics, and the history of English, and I'm genuinely fascinated by Northern Europe — its languages, its history, and the way cultures collide and intertwine across a map. I'm calm, empathetic, and resilient under pressure by nature, and curious about pretty much everything: languages, cultures, and the history and geography of the places they come from. In two years at the university, I taught, built several courses, and supervised student research, while also spending years interpreting at international festivals. And one memorable summer, I dropped all of that to go and restore a lighthouse at the edge of the world — more on that below.

University Lecturer

2024 – 2026

Department of English Philology, Nordic Languages and Linguodidactics, Northern (Arctic) Federal University, Arkhangelsk

- Taught English Language, Sociolinguistics, and History of the English Language to dozens of undergraduates across several groups
- Designed five complete courses — spanning Practical English, Sociolinguistics, and the History of the English Language — with syllabi, materials, and assessment
- Supervised three student research projects in linguistics and regional geography

Museum Guide // Tour Interpreter

Nevyansk State Historical and Architectural Museum, Nevyansk

2023

- Led guided tours and thematic excursions on regional history and architecture for Russian-speaking and international visitors

Academic Activity

- Organised academic round tables and panel discussions on intercultural communication
- Delivered open lectures for students and the wider academic community
- Served on the university's admissions committee

Publications

The Place of Foreign-Language Writing in the System of Collaborative Learning at University

Digital Support for Teaching Collaborative Writing in English at a University

The Intercultural Code in "The Dream of the Rood": A Synthesis of Germanic and Christian Traditions

A System for Assessing Collaborative Writing in Teaching Foreign-Language Writing to University Students

Conference Talks

A Semantic Analysis of Power and Subordination Vocabulary in the Old English Poem "The Dream of the Rood"

Toponymic Subordination: The Norwegianisation of Sámi Place Names on Maps (19th–21st Centuries)

Norwegian in the Germanic Language Family: Classification, History, and the Current Situation

Realisation of the Communicative Tactic of Presentation in the Old English Poem "The Dream of the Rood"

The 18th Century as a Transitional Period in Norwegian Visual Art

Master's Degree in Pedagogy

Northern (Arctic) Federal University, Arkhangelsk

2024 – 2026

Specialisation: Designing Educational Resources and Teaching English in a Digital Environment.

Dissertation: Using digital tools to teach collaborative writing in English to university students of linguistics.

Bachelor's Degree in Linguistics

Northern (Arctic) Federal University, Arkhangelsk 2020 – 2024

Specialisation: Theory and Practice of Intercultural Communication. Languages of study: English and Norwegian.

Thesis: Communicative and speech tactics in an Old English text (based on the poem "The Dream of the Rood").

Additional Training

- Completed a course in inclusive education — working with people with disabilities
- Completed a first-aid course
- Trained for years at an art school and can still hold my own at academic drawing

Skills

University teaching & curriculum development
Academic writing & research (EN / RU)
Translation & interpreting (EN–RU)
Digital learning & EdTech tools
Public speaking

Languages

English	C1 // Advanced
Russian	Native
Norwegian	B1 // Intermediate

This is a condensed summary — the full version, with publications, conference talks, festivals and volunteering, and more, is at saveliybyzov.github.io/cv

Savely Byzov // Belgrade, Serbia // hello@saveliybyzov.ru